The Digital Divide: Reducing inequalities for better health

The Digital Divide: Reducing inequalities for better health

Governments should include digital access and skills as one of the key measures to assess deprivation

Healthcare systems should be responsible for helping staff to assess and support those who want to get online

Digital-by-default must operate in the context of the digital divide

Digital training should be mandatory for all health and care staff

The Digital Divide: Reducing inequalities for better health

Digital products should be tailored to the needs of those with additional accessibility requirements

Real world evaluation is an invaluable tool to prove the benefits of health interventions

Everyone should be given access to their health and care data with summary analytics, and the information should

New digital care pathways and other support services must be co-produced with the communities they serve
